
INTRODUCTORY REMARKS TO PANEL 1

CHRISTINE FARLEY

We have a wonderful panel this morning. I am pleased to introduce our first speaker Dan Burk, who is the Oppenheimer, Wolff & Donnelly law professor at the University of Minnesota, where he teaches Patents and Copyrights. He has a B.S. in Microbiology, an M.S. in Molecular Biology and Biochemistry, and he has law degrees from Arizona and Stanford. He is a prolific writer in the areas of new technologies, Internet regulation, competition policy, and IP and gender. Dan has been one of our regular male feminist theorists participating in these conferences. We are very happy to have him here again.

Our second speaker this morning is Carys Craig, who is an Associate Professor of Law at Osgood Hall, where she teaches Copyrights, Trademarks, and International IP. She has an L.L.B. from the University of Edinburgh, an L.L.M. from Kingston University, and she is an S.J.D. candidate at the University of Toronto. Her research is primarily in the area of Intellectual Property, with an emphasis upon Public Interest Theory and Public Domain. I am very happy to welcome these two terrific speakers.
