12:00 pm –2:00 pm

American University Washington College of Law
4801 Massachusetts Avenue, NW, Room 603,
Washington, DC

Who is to blame for the current economic crisis? Should Congress pass legislation to regulate corporations? What influence will the current administration have over action by Congress? Panelists will discuss potential benefits and disadvantages to changes in corporate regulation and other issues relevant to addressing the current economic situation. Each speaker will represent different perspectives on economic policy and debate the merits of proposed measures to improve the economy.

Confirmed Speakers Include:

Professor Jeffrey Lubbers, American University Washington College of Law

Jeff Mahoney, Council of Institutional Investors

Sarah Bloom Raskin, Maryland Commissioner of Financial Regulation
