

Public Trials? Lifting the Veil on Military Courts-Martial

Sponsored by the National Institute of Military Justice

April 14, 2009

12:00 pm – 1:30 pm

American University Washington College of Law
4801 Massachusetts Avenue, NW, Room 603 , Washington, DC

This program will analyze the theoretical openness of military courts-martial versus the reality that most courts-martial have few, if any, civilian spectators. Because of a fractured and not readily available docketing system, court dates are rarely widely publicized. The distinguished panel will suggest ways of remedying these shortcomings.

Panelists Include:

Lucy Dalglish, Executive Director, Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press

Nayna Malayang, LLM Candidate, WCL & NIMJ Dean's Fellow

Commander Stephen McCleary, Coast Guard's Office of Military Justice

Moderator: Michelle McCluer, Executive Director, National Institute of Military Justice

General Registration – no charge.

To register, please go to www.wcl.american.edu/secle/registration.

For further information, please contact: Office of Special Events & Continuing Legal Education, 202.274.4075 or secle@wcl.american.edu.