Graduation and Commencement

American University Washington College of Law confers degrees at the end of each fall, spring, and summer term. The Commencement ceremony is held at the end of the spring semester to recognize spring, fall, and the previous summer's degree candidates.

All coursework and all other degree requirements must be completed prior to the degree conferral date for the graduation term. A degree cannot be conferred unless all coursework has received a final grade. Students participating in exchange programs in their final semester must complete all work and the term at the visited institution must be over prior to the date of the American University Washington College of Law degree conferral date.

Additional information about graduation and commencement ceremonies can be found on the university's commencement page: <https://www.wcl.american.edu/here/student-life/studentaffairs/commencement/>.

Eligibility to Participate in Commencement

Participation in the commencement ceremony does not itself constitute conferral of a degree, nor does it imply an obligation on the part of the university to award the degree before all requirements have been met and certified.

Juris Doctor (JD) and Master of Laws (LLM) degree students who have met all other university requirements for their degree, but lack 8 or fewer credit hours maximum may participate in commencement activities if they have a current GPA of 3.0 or above, and have enrolled in the summer following May commencement for the courses needed to complete their degree requirements.

Doctoral (SJD) students must complete all degree and university requirements and be cleared for graduation in order to participate in commencement.

Regardless of the number of credit hours needed to finish their program at AUWCL, international students enrolled at AUWCL as part of a dual degree or joint degree program under a Memorandum of Agreement with another institution may participate in the commencement ceremonies prior to returning to their home institution to complete their degree requirement.

Students who are not completing degree requirements, but who wish to participate in a commencement ceremony must petition using the Commencement Ceremony Participation Request Form. If given permission to participate, those students' names will not appear in the commencement program but will appear in the program for the following year.

The university strictly enforces this policy for attending commencement. Students planning to graduate at a particular time are responsible for maintaining an appropriate course load and completing degree requirements in time to be eligible for their targeted graduation.
