ENVIRONMENTAL LAW SUMMER PROGRAM
MAY 27 - JUNE 20, 2014

The Environmental Law Summer Program offers a broad range of seminars on international and domestic environmental law. The program engages law students and practitioners from around the world in intensive training focusing on developing issues in environmental law. Participants learn from expert practitioners from international organizations, U.S. government agencies, leading international law firms, and non-governmental organizations. Site visits, panel discussions, guest lecturers, and other activities provide participants with additional learning and networking opportunities.

Day and evening seminars offer attendees the option of pairing them with a summer internship, job, or seminars in the law school's other summer programs.

The program offers site visits to organizations that may include the World Bank (including its Inspection Panel), Organization of American States, Compliance Advisor/Ombudsman of the International Finance Corporation, United Nations Environment Programme, Beveridge & Diamond, Center for International Environmental Law, and Earth Rights International.

SEMINARS MAY INCLUDE:

- International Institutions and Environmental Protection
- Human Rights and Environment in Latin America
- U.S. Congress and Environmental Law
- Development Finance and the Environment
- International Wildlife and Biodiversity Law
- Environmental Compliance and Enforcement
- International Business and the Environment
- International Climate Change Law and Negotiations
- Hydraulic Fracturing ("Fracking") Law and Policy
