

The Future of Legal Education is in Practice at American University Washington College of Law

Recruiting Students and Alumni

American University Washington College of Law (WCL) and the Office of Career & Professional Development (OCPD) invite you to partner with our students and alumni to fulfill your organization's legal recruitment objectives.

WCL has gained national and international recognition for our experiential learning programs, distinguished faculty, real-world legal education, and the diversity of our accomplished student body. OCPD works with legal employers to publicize opportunities to qualified students and alumni, and also serves the important mission of educating law students and lawyers about professionalism in the workplace.

WCL students pursue internships, externships and other legal positions with a variety of employers in the Washington metropolitan area and across the country. In addition, graduates of WCL practice in virtually all employer sectors including:

- Private Practice (firms and corporations of all sizes);
- Government (federal, state and local);
- Judicial (internships and post-graduate clerkships with federal and state judges); and
- Public Interest (spanning a broad range of non-profit organizations).

WCL students continuously develop their skills and regularly lend their talents to employers during both the summer and academic year. Given the school's culture of public service, students also contribute to a variety of employer pro bono initiatives.

For more information about recruiting programs, and publicizing opportunities for students and alumni, please contact Traci Mundy Jenkins, OCPD's Assistant Dean, at (202) 274-4090 or tjenkins@wcl.american.edu. Opportunities can also be sent directly to jobs@wcl.american.edu.